SLPowers Named Member of Special Microsoft TechSelect Advisory Council

Boca Raton, Florida – June 26, 2007 -- SLPowers has been selected as part of the Microsoft TechSelect Advisory Council, which held its first meeting at Microsoft's headquarters in Redmond, WA, on June 6, 2007. The Council was established to address emerging changes in technology and business with the goal of better serving the needs of the Small and Medium Business (SMB) market segment. The Value Added Resellers (VAR's) participating in the forum represented the needs and goals of the end users, defined by Microsoft as businesses with less than 500 users. The specialized group will continue to meet every 6 months in Redmond, with regularly scheduled online sessions in between.

“Microsoft Corporation has recognized the potential of this market space and is seeking feedback to help ensure that product developments are right on target,” stated Heath Gieson, Director of Technical Services at SLPowers. “This council provides an opportunity take part in developing solutions for today’s complex technological challenges.”

“As one of only five companies selected nationwide to take part in this Council, we’re honored at the opportunity,” added Bob Hochmuth, SLPowers VP of Sales. “I think we surprised Microsoft by having a consensus of opinion on many of the issues that we covered. We feel that this new channel of communication between Microsoft and reseller partners will go a long way to help pinpoint the needs of the end user and improve the relationship with resellers in the SMB space.”

Supported by industry leaders including IBM, Hewlett-Packard, Symantec and Cisco, TechSelect is a community of leading Tech Data resellers, many of whom are focused on solution selling into the SMB and other vertical markets. The TechSelect community facilitates interaction opportunities that allow members to partner with one another to build multifaceted relationships amongst all stakeholders - including Tech Data, manufacturers and resellers.
